There are eight different species of woodpecker that make their home in North Carolina, and seven of them are readily found in Mecklenburg County! And, if you have the right habitat, all will readily come to your feeders.

Woodpeckers are fascinating creatures with several unique adaptations not found in any other type of bird. Did you know that woodpeckers have bristle-like feathers over their nostrils to keep wood particles from being inhaled? Learn more interesting facts about these unique birds during this program.

Come here David Schroder from WildBirds Unlimited, present on how to find, identify, feed, and appreciate each of the woodpecker species right here in our backyard.
